

EDITORIAL NOTES.

What editor Dana says about California wines is true. Thousands of gallons are shipped East every year containing adulterants; good wines mixed with bad, and in some cases, bad wines blended with worse. It was once proposed to pass a law allowing no wine to leave California without a certificate of purity from the State Chemist, and the wine dealers of California downed the bill. This shows on its face that they did not want to be compelled to make honest wine, and they cut the throat of the wine business of California when they did it. Dana knows what he is talking about. There are plenty of first-class wine makers in California, like Shram, Parrot, Howes, Whitmore and others, but the big wholesale dealers have ruined the business by their greed and dishonesty.

Silvermen should not relax their zeal and efforts through the cries of the old party papers "that the prospect for silver is bright;" "that free coinage is near at hand," and all such nonsense sprung in the interest of goldbugs to lull the silver men into a fancied security, and to induce them to rest on their oars, says the Halley, Idaho, News-Miner. The outlook for silver will not be bright until we have a straight free coinage president and congress, and they must be elected before we ever get them. That's the sum and substance of the whole matter, and the silver men in the old parties know it as well as anybody, and it won't do them a particle of good to straddle, or hum and haw, or evade the inevitable. Both of the old parties to-day are ruptured badly, and the silver question is causing the rupture.

The Bakerfield Californian says that the officers of Douglas county, this state, are setting a good example to the alleged detectives of San Francisco. A horrible crime was committed near Genoa, and every person under suspicion has been arrested and will be required to give an account of his movements. The officers did not start out with the theory that only a certain individual could have committed the crime, and then bend every effort to convict him, as in the Durrant case, but took the more sensible ground of weighing the evidence against all toward whom suspicion was directed. By so doing the real guilty man has been given little opportunity to destroy the evidence against him.

The poisoning of Mrs. Matthews in San Francisco is a very strange case. She went to the cemetery with her child, where she had convulsions and died. While dying she said that Mr. Winthrop, an officer of the cemetery gave her a pill. Her child confirms the story. Strychnine was found in her stomach. Winthrop said he found her in convulsions but gave nothing. The child said that he gave her mother a pill and took one himself, but spit it out into his hand and dropped it. A search was made for the pill where he dropped it but it could not be found.

When the Nevada Republicans are talking about their fidelity to silver and that the party is unanimous for the white metal all over the United States, the Oregon Republicans rudely shock the story, by declaring in their State Convention unequivocally against the use of silver as money, and coming out squarely for the gold standard. The Oregon Republicans are honest enough to express their real sentiments, but the Nevada Republicans don't think it wise to do this.

In yesterday's APPEAL mention was made that Judge Ross was, once tendered an appointment to the Supreme Bench of the United States by Abraham Lincoln, and that he lost the place by some one forging a letter and declining the honor and sending it to Lincoln. The name should have been Hoffman instead of Ross, and prior to his death in San Francisco he related the circumstances to numbers of his friends.

Mrs. Peary, wife of the Arctic explorer, is trying to raise $12,000 to go to the North Pole and find her husband. When a man will leave a good, warm hearted wife and seek the North Pole to spend a year or so, the wife had better hunt up another husband as soon as possible after collecting her first husband's life insurance.

After "Paradise Lost" was printed it was translated into French, and this version falling into the hands of an innocent Englishman, he made a prose translation into English and sent it to a publisher. The manuscript is in the British Museum.

The Reno Journal says that the item that has gone the rounds of the State press to the effect that Judge Cheney has passed upon the validity of the new sheep law is untrue, as no case involving the constitutionality of the act has been before Judge Cheney or any other District Judge in the State.
